Creating a Shopify Store

Now that you've decided to take your business online, at Shopify, you can set up a comprehensive e-store that covers everything- building your online marketplace from scratch to constructing a social media store, to solutions with shipping, payment and more.

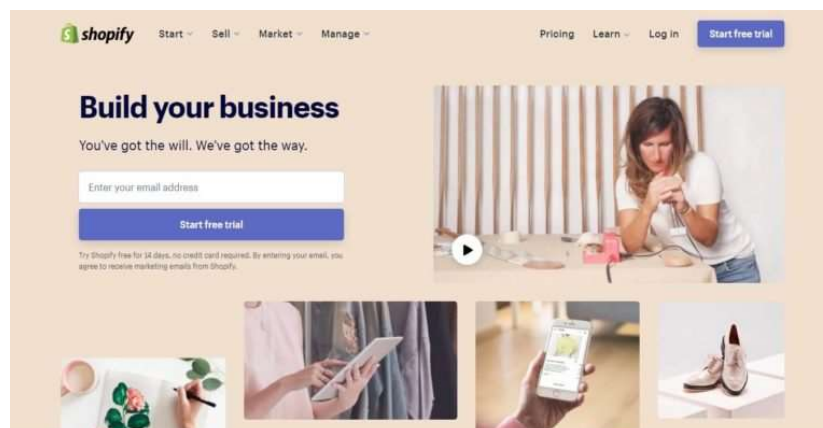

Once you have your goods, your suppliers, and you've decided on an ecommerce marketing strategy for your product, you have to find the best possible way to market them. However, you can't just start selling; you require a store to begin with.

How to create your first Shopify store?

While it is a known fact that setting up an e-commerce store often is extremely time-consuming and involves multiple extensive processes, the reason why Shopify has gained immense popularity as an e-commerce platform is its easy usability.

Yes, creating an online store has never been easier with Shopify, and here is how you can set up your first store on the web.

Step 1: Create your account

Visit the Shopify homepage; depending on your geographical location, you will be redirected to your local edition of Shopify.com, where you will see the option to begin your free trial. Click on the icon, found on the top-right corner of your webpage. Next, you will be prompted to fill in some basic details following which; you will have the option of creating a store name. Remember that your store name on Shopify is your identity, so make sure to choose a name that syncs with your business. In case the name you have chosen is unavailable, you will be asked to change Shopify store name.

Step 2: Provide more details about your business

In addition to providing personal contact information, Shopify will also ask you to provide information about your business. Fill in the fields requesting information about your business revenue, state what your goal from your Shopify store is and billing details. Once these have been filled, you will be redirected to your Shopify admin page.

Step 3: Customize your online store

The administrator page on Shopify has all the details you will need to get your online marketplace started. Here, you will have the ability to add items to your marketplace, whether individually or en masse. You can also add services, files, and any items that might be available for digital download.

Step 4: Choose how you want your site to look

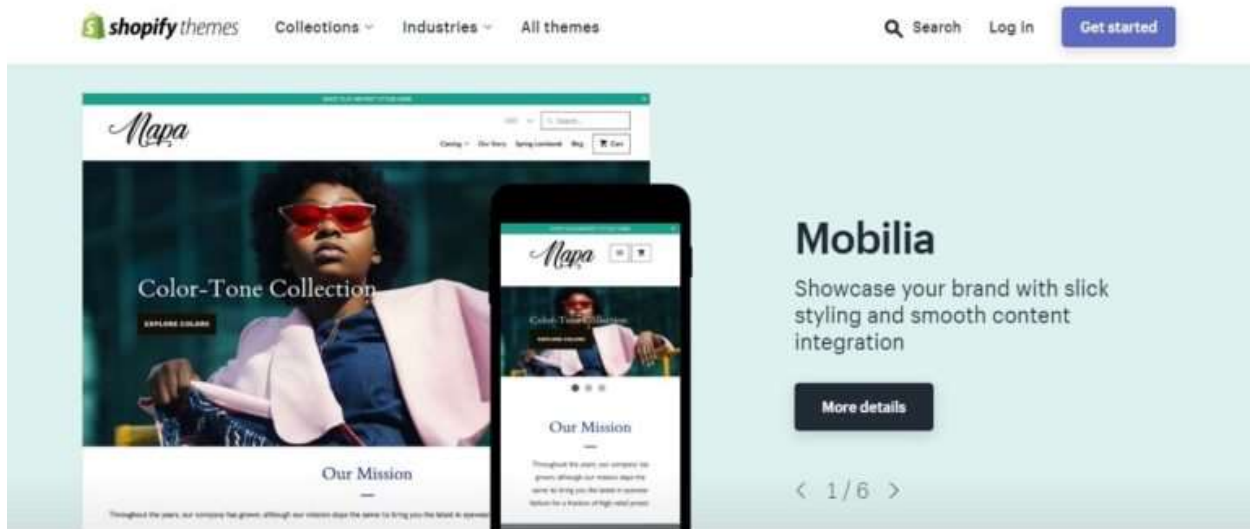

The aesthetics of your store should reflect not only your product but your ethos, your style, and more. You would pay close attention to the interiors of any brick-and-mortar store you set up to maximize customer footfall, so why should your virtual store be any different? On Shopify, start by choosing a basic theme from one of the many on offer for virtual storefronts, and then customize those further to suit your brand design and look.

Step 5: Further customize your site's layout

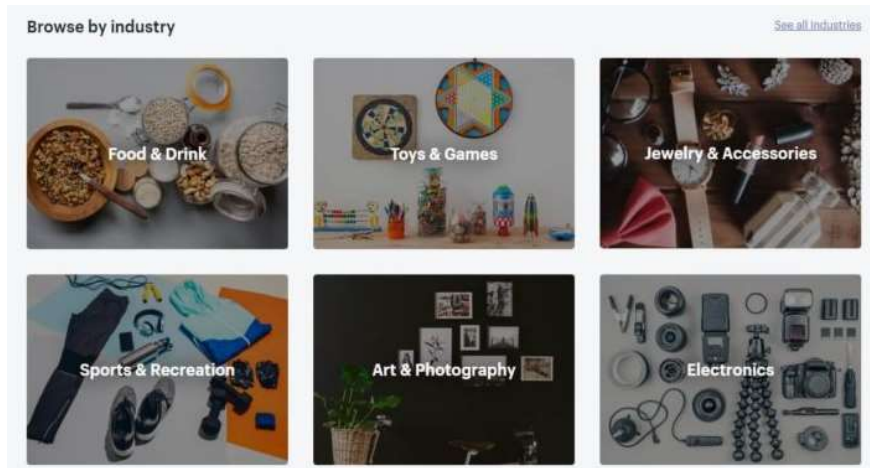

There are over 100 themes available on the Shopify theme store, many of them for free. This is particularly useful for businesses that are just starting out, and may not necessarily have the budget for the more premium themes. There are modifiable themes available under both the free and paid sections, meaning that you can still have your e-store look the way you want it to.

Knowing basic HTML and CSS, although it would be helpful in personalizing your store, however, need not be a necessity. Shopify storefronts are all as customizable regardless of whether you are familiar with code or not.

Should you have a bit more money to spend, Shopify has a network of web-design agencies called “Shopify Experts”, who can help you with the finer points of customization

You can also choose your Shopify theme based on the industry you are in; the layout on Shopify's website helps you streamline your search as well. For example, if you are selling apparel, Shopify has a category of recommended themes (again, available in both free and paid versions) for you which may differ from theme options available for the travel industry.

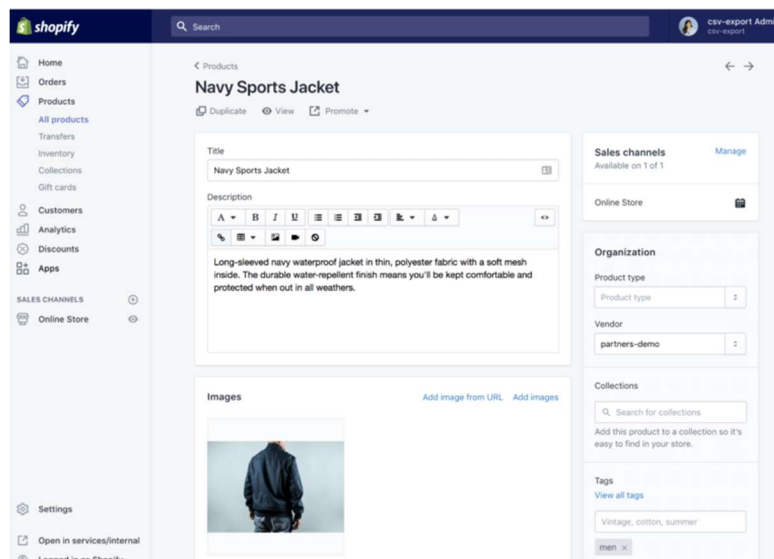

Before you choose a theme, you will be able to see a preview of the same in action; this is especially helpful if you're using a paid theme – who doesn't want to avoid buyer's remorse? You will also be able to see reviews by others who have used the same theme.

A big part of using a theme is how well it is optimized for mobile usage. According to recent statistics, it is estimated today that over 52% of website users today access sites via mobile, meaning that it is crucial for your site to be mobile-friendly. Since mobile optimization is also a crucial factor in terms of search engine optimization, this is something you as a seller want to pay close attention to.

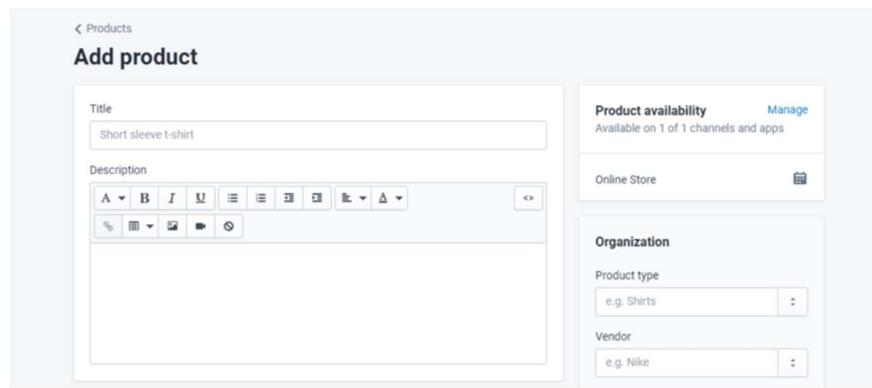

You will be able to customize the look of your website, including footers, text overlays and more. You can upload logos for your company or brand here, pick fonts based on your aesthetic and brand design, change the color scheme of your site, and add information about the items for sale that you would like listed per page of your site, and add links to your social media profiles.

Step 6: Upload products

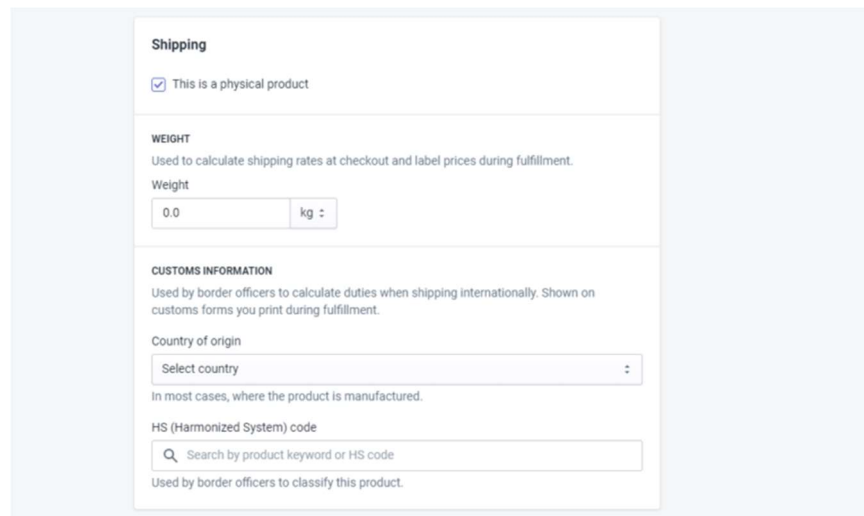

Now that you've decided exactly how your site should look, it is crucial to list all the products you have up for sale, or the services available.

To the left side of your admin panel, you will see a bar that says "Products". Select that to either add new products to your listings or choose from already existing products in your inventory. Here, you can add the name of the product, a description of what you are selling, images, pricing and more. Shopify allows you also to list any variants of a certain product you may have on offer. You can also add SEO terms, shipping information and more; there is also an option to list inventory for your customers to know what items are still available.

The screenshot shows the 'Add product' form in the Shopify admin. The form is divided into several sections:

- Title: A text input field containing 'Short sleeve t-shirt'.
- Description: A rich text editor with a toolbar containing various formatting options like bold, italic, underline, and list.
- Product availability: A section with a 'Manage' link and the text 'Available on 1 of 1 channels and apps'. Below it is a toggle for 'Online Store'.
- Organization: A section with two dropdown menus: 'Product type' (with 'e.g. Shirts' as an example) and 'Vendor' (with 'e.g. Nike' as an example).

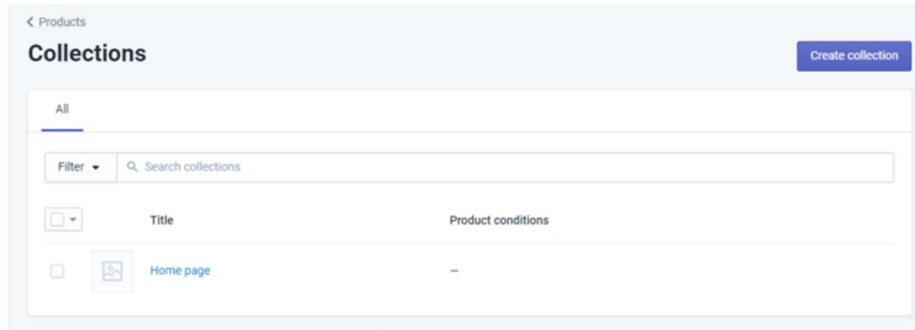

The screenshot shows the 'Shipping' section of the 'Add product' form. It includes the following fields and options:

- Shipping: A checkbox labeled 'This is a physical product' which is checked.
- WEIGHT: A section with a description: 'Used to calculate shipping rates at checkout and label prices during fulfillment.' Below it is a 'Weight' input field with '0.0' and a unit dropdown set to 'kg'.
- CUSTOMS INFORMATION: A section with a description: 'Used by border officers to calculate duties when shipping internationally. Shown on customs forms you print during fulfillment.' Below it is a 'Country of origin' dropdown menu with 'Select country' as the placeholder. A note below reads: 'In most cases, where the product is manufactured.'
- HS (Harmonized System) code: A search input field with a magnifying glass icon and the text 'Search by product keyword or HS code'. A note below reads: 'Used by border officers to classify this product.'

Step 7: Group and categorize your products

For the ease of access to your customers, make sure all your products have been appropriately categorized. For example, you may sell more than just apparel, in which case, you will want to list either the sex, age group or more, that you offer apparel for or other relevant information. Similarly, if you sell homewares, you will want to have a separate category for that as well.

This option, too, is available via the same admin page, below your products drop down.

Although you can, you need not add products to collections individually. You can also set up your products in a way that they have added to certain collections automatically if they fulfill specific criteria.

Step 8: Set up payment

This step is the most crucial while creating your first ever Shopify store. Once your products are listed, and your e-commerce site is good to go, you need to set up how customers will pay you, how you will receive payments, and more. Shopify has its own gateway; however, you may also use third-party payment solutions.

When selecting a payment gateway, make sure you know exactly what fees you will be charged per transaction along with knowledge about the various kinds of accepted payment modes, cards accepted, and more. You can start by scrutinizing your user-base and demographic carefully and then conduct a survey if required to know what modes of payment your customers are most likely to use. You can then pick a solution accordingly.

Step 9: Know everything about taxes and shipping costs

This is the step where it gets even more serious. Ensure all your details have been properly filled out for taxation purposes because you will need to mention these details within your products. Always keep records of your investments, purchases and other relevant information, and make multiple copies of your data.

Also, your customers will need to know whether additional taxes are included in their costing. To ensure transparency, you can mention taxes and shipping charges for each product under the products section, and also specify clearly if they are included in the cost of the product or incur an additional charge.

Step 10: Test your order system

Shopify has something called a "Bogus Gateway"- which is where you can test if your order system is up and working correctly.

To put it more simply, to test that your payments and ordering systems are underway and ensure they are working properly, place an order with real payment information just like you would on any other e-commerce websites. Go on to buy an item; however, the trick here is to simply cancel the order well in time to ensure your own money is refunded. The next step involves a quick check from the back end of your payment gateway, to test if your order system is working fine.

Step 11: Customize your domain

A unique domain name is one of the most important bits of e-commerce. You can either purchase a domain name through Shopify or through an external hosting website. While Shopify domains only cost between 2-4 US dollars more, with an external domain you may have to redirect the DNS on your own. In case you still decide to go ahead with an external domain, make sure to update the information on your Shopify store. This can be done by going back to your Settings and finding the Domain tab. Once you're there, click on "Add Domain" to add it. Following this, you will also need to change the existing DNS records.

Step 12: Remove password protection

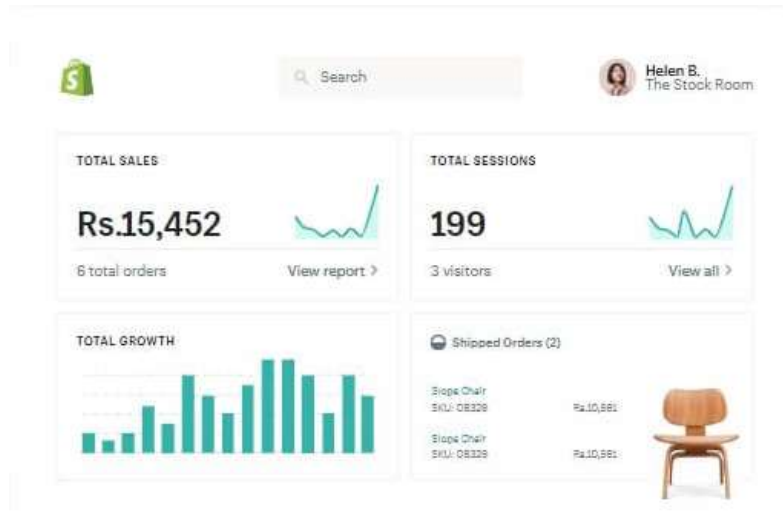

When you create your Shopify store, it by default is password-protected, so while you are setting it up, it is inaccessible to anyone else but yourself. Make sure that after you are done completely setting it up, you have to disable the password protection, or your site will remain inaccessible to customers.

Step 13: Run periodical checks

Make sure to run periodic administrative work on the back-end, particularly if you are changing domains, upgrading plans and more.

What can you sell on Shopify?

As a maiden entrepreneur, starting off an online store for the first time can be quite exciting. However, to succeed in the area of ecommerce not only requires perseverance but also an up-to-date skill set. You already know about the benefits of using Shopify as a platform, you know the best plan to opt for. What next? To list your business among the most successful Shopify stores, you must find the right and trending products to sell on Shopify, which can often be a real challenge!

As a first-timer, however, there are a couple of things you need to know before you decide what to sell on Shopify.

Product restrictions on Shopify

Certain products and services are not allowed to be sold on an online Shopify store. Before you decide what you want to include in your online store, here is a list of products, and businesses that are prohibited on Shopify.

- Age-restricted products which include alcohol, adult content, tobacco and weapons
- Human hair, hair-extensions or fake hair
- Illegal content
- Sale of social media activity
- Any material that classifies as pornography
- The business that involves fortune tellers
- Pharmacies, pseudo pharmaceuticals, pharmaceuticals or any substance that imitates illegal drugs
- Sexually oriented massage parlors, running sex clubs/shows, strip shows, topless bars
- Wire transfers, currency exchange, virtual currencies
- Escorts, mail-order brides, prostitutes, dating services, and more
- Multi-level marketing, 'get rich instantly' scams, practices to con people

Services you can sell on Shopify

In today's age and time, convenience is the biggest factor in both sell and buy things. With technology, right at our fingertips, the marketplace has made its way online and is here to stay. If you are wondering what you can sell on Shopify, the answer is, literally anything and everything can be sold online, from baby care products, expensive car parts to lifestyle accessories and more. Anything that can be delivered physically to your customers qualifies for a product or service to be sold on Shopify. As a seller, all you have to do is make sure it's all legal and legit.

If you plan to start selling your products here, then you need to do your research about which are the best-selling products in the current day scenario and also identifying a specific niche market or an avenue that is untapped would make your start faster. The best thing about how to sell with Shopify is that you are not just limited to selling products; you can also venture into selling services and digital products that include selling services like conferences or workshop venues. Shopify also has apps that allow you to create a digital product and also attach a digital file associated with it.

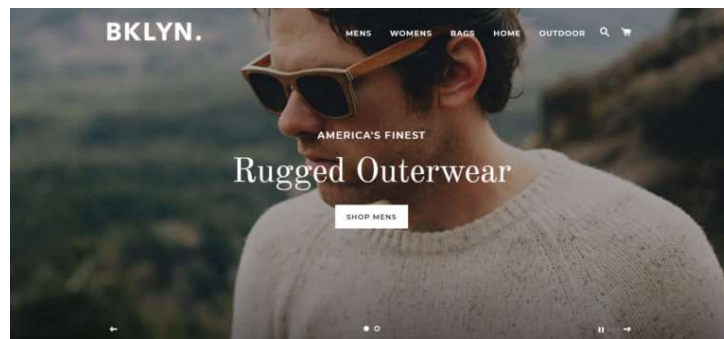

Shopify Themes

Whether you're a beginner or seasoned pro, you can go for themes that are super user-friendly and come free of cost. Be sure to pick a theme that best blends with its features - Here are 10 free Shopify Themes to get you started.

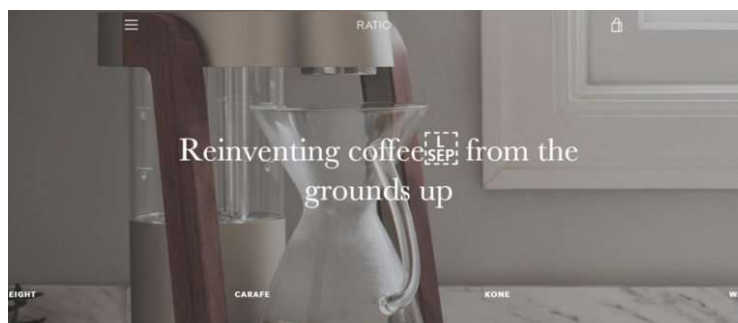

1. Brooklyn

One of the best features of Brooklyn is that you can exhibit various products towards the top of your homepage. Also, your most popular merchandise can be displayed in a dynamic product grid that resembles a gallery.

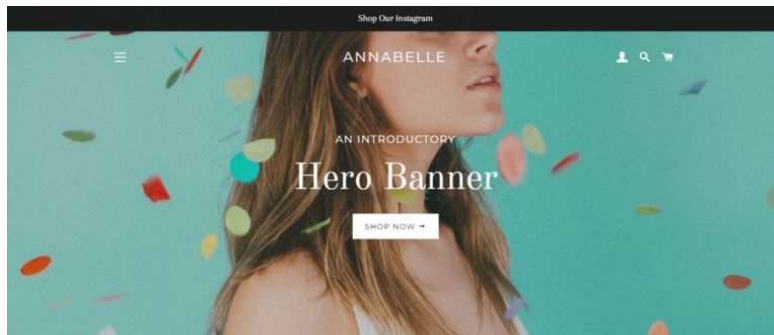

2. Narrative

The Narrative is just about perfect for your Shopify store if you are planning on a small catalog, the perfect outlet for selling a product or two. You can customize this to suit your likes, choose from multiple colors and various available styles or even add a personal touch to images and block quotes.

3. Annabelle

If apparel is what you're looking to sell, the best theme you can choose for your Shopify store is Anabelle. With the homepage variations, you can show off your products, choose between overflow and full-width sliders, homepage featured banners, magnifying effects and more.

4. Minimal

With the Minimal theme, your customers can select if they would like to see specific categories only. You can customize a slideshow with this theme, choose from multiple styles including vintage and fashion, and also apply product filtering of your choice.

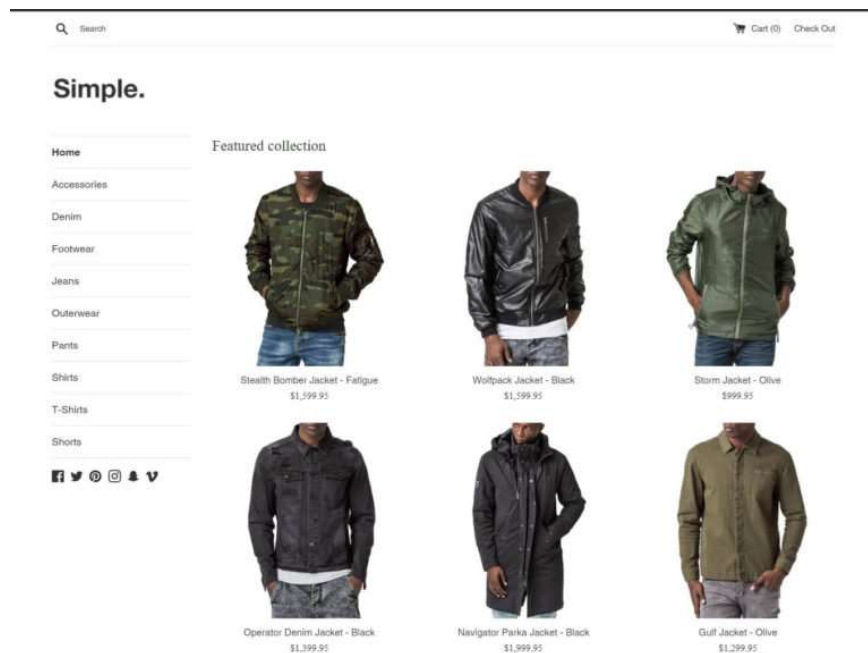

5. Boundless

With this theme, you can select from monochrome and vibrant styles, multiple color palettes, customizable content sections, social media icons and more on the homepage. Boundless is extremely mobile-friendly with an additional drop-down navigational support. Also, the home age is external media friendly, allowing you to add videos and full-width images.

6. Simple

Resembling what the name suggests, Simple offers minimal design templates with adequate white space. This theme allows you to display a large collection of products and comes with an accordion menu that is featured on the sidebar. This way, not only are you able to display your products in a less cluttered exhibit but also let your customers view all of them easily when they use the zoom feature.

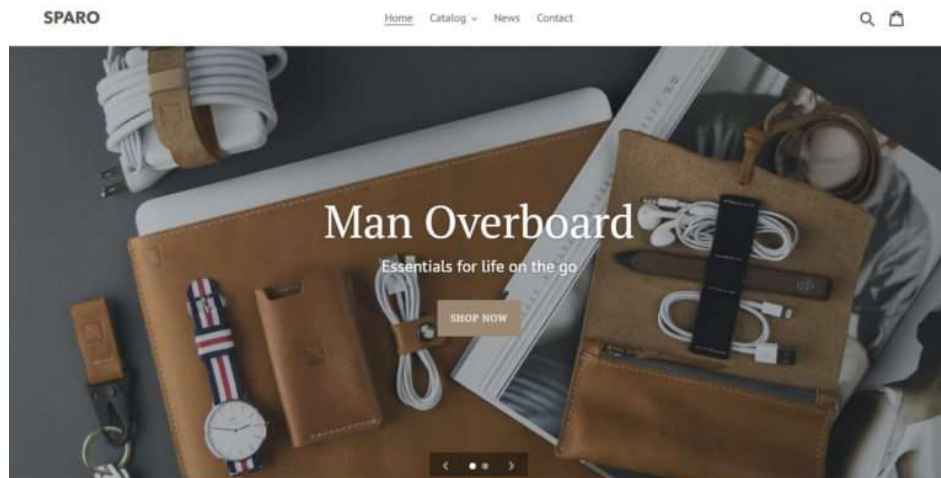

7. Venture

While most free Shopify themes cater to apparel and lifestyle products, Venture is your ideal choice if you're looking to sell services in adventure sports and outdoor activities. The header lets you talk about your company, with the large image format and overlaying text. The theme is further organized into image galleries and links that help classify your product categories seamlessly.

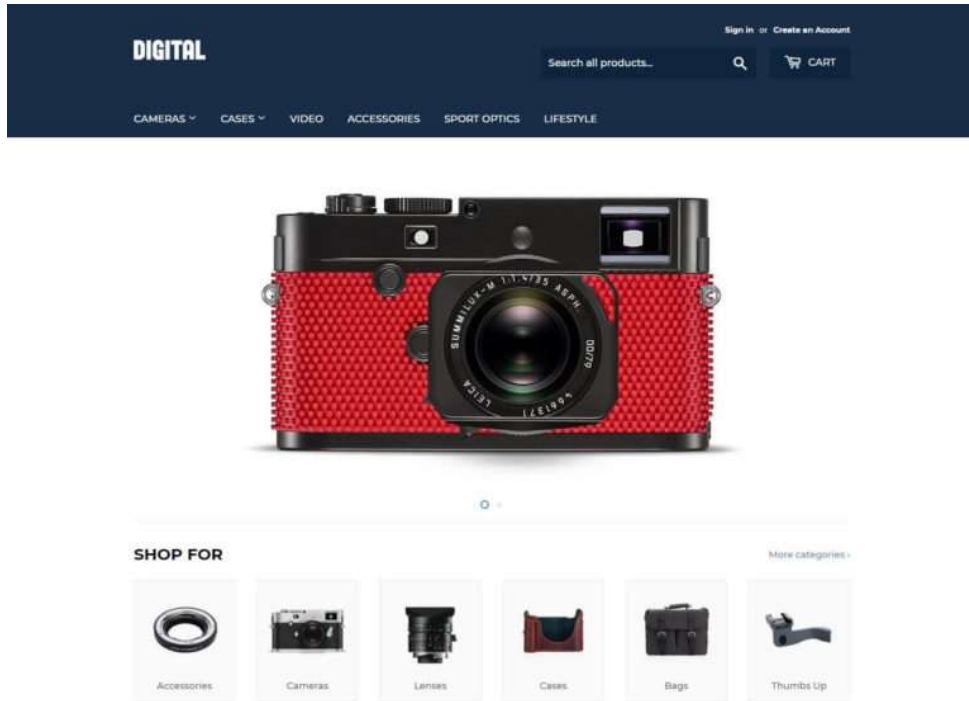

8. Debut

Minimalistic with a nearly-retro configuration, the Debut theme for Shopify includes social media buttons, video support on the homepage, and large image configuration on the header, customer testimonial spaces, and a single featured product image. The product page is single featured and displays only one product, image and information.

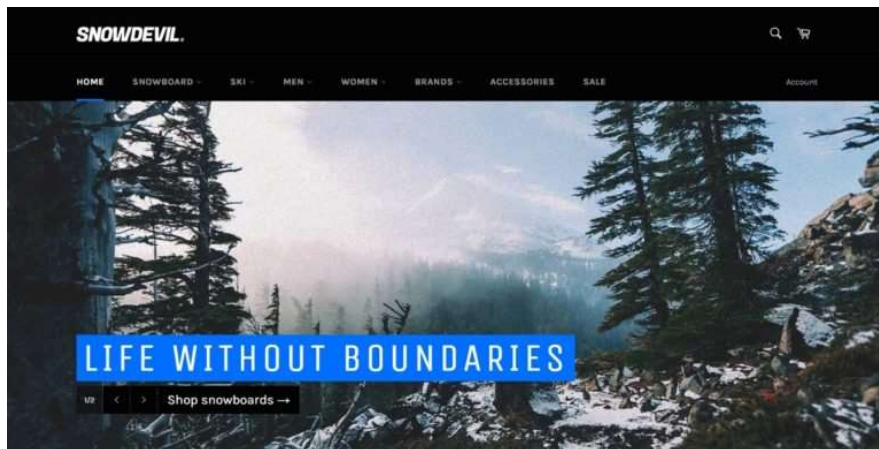

9. Supply

Made to suit larger catalog sizes, the Supply theme takes a customer directly into the selling process with its large collection. You can share promotions using the slideshow feature, use various color palettes, and add social media icons. The best feature of this theme is its collection filtering options that let customers filter brand, price and more.

10. Star

Star offers you extremely premium-like features that are extremely versatile as well. You can add color swatches, parallax effects, Google maps, product reviews and more to this theme while also adding social media buttons if you want.

Shopify Plus

Shopify Plus is Shopify's answer for enterprise-level eCommerce businesses. While Shopify's plans are made for small to medium-sized businesses, Shopify Plus handles high-growth, high-volume online stores and brands. Promising a platform that's flexible, fast to launch, and scalable, Shopify Plus can give larger brands the foundation they need to grow bigger and faster.

Website Optimization

The single most important thing is conversions and conversion rate.

Ecommerce Conversions—What’s a Good Rate?

Before we talk about optimizing eCommerce conversions, let’s define what a conversion looks like and discuss what’s a good eCommerce conversion rate.

Typically, a conversion means someone has saved an item to buy later, added an item to their shopping cart, or made a purchase. The conversion rate is the number of people who take action, as a percentage of the number of people who see your page.

According to Monetate, the average eCommerce conversion rate is about 2.77% globally.

Conversion Rate:

Conversion Rates	Q1 2016	Q2 2016	Q3 2016	Q4 2016	Q1 2017
Global	3.10%	2.81%	2.52%	2.94%	2.48%
US	3.04%	2.76%	2.48%	2.97%	2.46%
GB	4.50%	4.09%	3.88%	3.94%	3.57%

Conversion Rates by Device	Q1 2016	Q2 2016	Q3 2016	Q4 2016	Q1 2017
Traditional	4.23%	3.88%	3.66%	4.25%	3.63%
Tablet	1.42%	1.31%	1.17%	1.49%	1.25%
Other	0.69%	0.35%	0.50%	0.35%	0.27%
Smartphone	3.59%	3.44%	3.21%	3.79%	3.14%

However, there are wide variations depending on location, the device people are shopping with, and the actual conversion action.

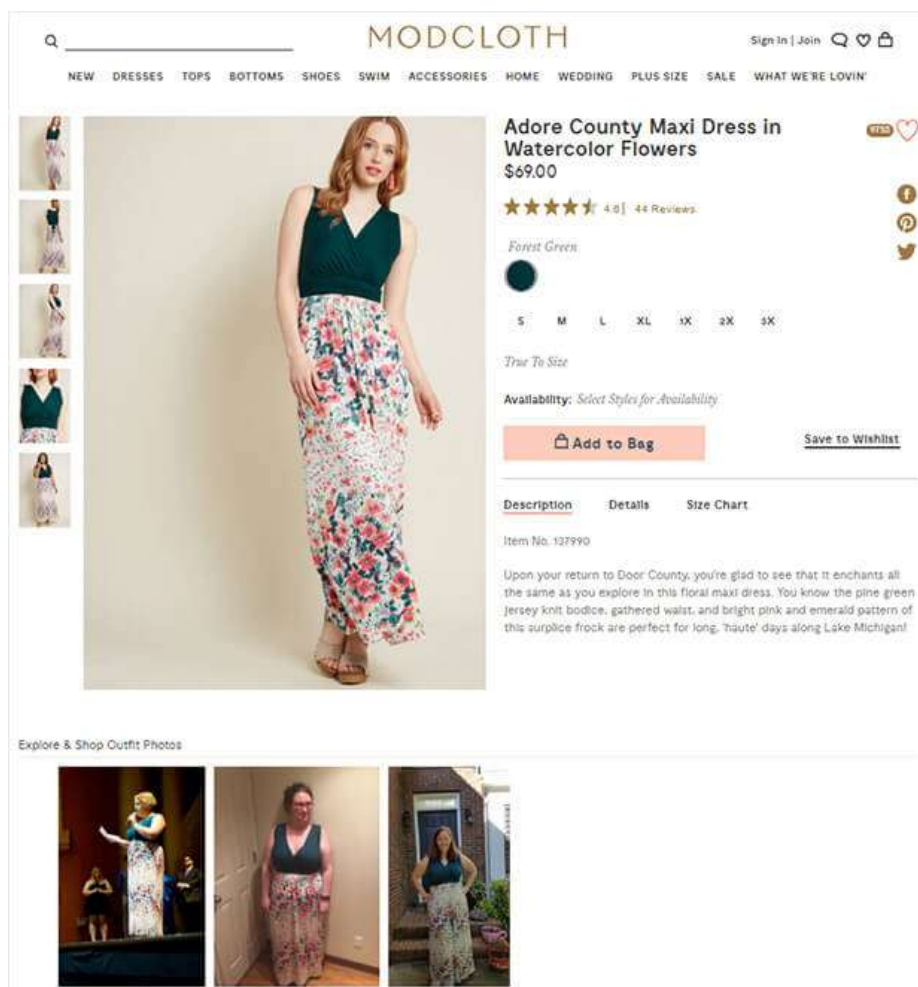

Improve Product Pages

Your first step should be to make sure your product pages are convincing visitors to buy. Here are some tips on achieving that. Make it easy to navigate your site so shoppers can find new products wherever they are.

You can also help your product pages do better with catchy, SEO-friendly titles for your products. That'll help the pages to rank in search and will help shoppers to more easily find what they need.

Product images are key because it's one of the ways shoppers see what they're getting. Include images that show different aspects of your product, or show the product used in different ways and contexts.

For example, Modcloth shows customer photos as well as model photos for its products:

Product descriptions help shoppers see what their life would look like with your product. At least, the best ones do. Stay away from standard product descriptions from manufacturers and craft your own.

Other ways to use eCommerce optimization on your product pages include:

- Using product details to flesh out specifications.
- Using ratings, reviews, views, and likes to provide social proof of your products' appeal.
- Getting the pricing right

Optimize Your Pricing

It's important to get your pricing right, or no one will want to buy. There are all kinds of tweaks you can make that help you earn more. If you want people to buy, you've got to tell them to buy. That's why it's important to have a clear call to action (CTA) that:

- Uses action words.
- Let's shoppers know what to do next, like "buy now", "add to cart" or "get this item"
- If your CTA is on a button, make sure the color stands out so it's highly visible.

Reduce Analysis Paralysis

Sometimes visitors can be overwhelmed by the number of options on offer. Fortunately, eCommerce optimization can help with that.

On a pricing page, it's best to keep the copy short and highlight the preferred option to reduce this.

Try Charm Pricing

Another eCommerce optimization to get more sales is to use charm pricing. Using numbers ending in 9 to price items can increase conversions, doubling them in some cases, says Gumroad:

price	conversion rate	price	conversion rate
.99	3.06%	1.99	5.2%
1	1.88%	2	2.39%
2.99	3.44%	3.99	3.21%
3	2.11%	4	2.39%
4.99	4.67%	5.99	1.56%
5	3.84%	6	1.42%

Optimize for Mobile

One eCommerce optimization you can't afford to skip is mobile. That's because more people use mobile devices than desktops. It's also a key channel for researching products and services.

So, you definitely need to improve your mobile conversion rate. Here are some tips on mobile eCommerce optimization.

Speed Up Your Site

Mobile users have limited patience. If your site takes more than 3 seconds to load, 40% of mobile users will leave.

To speed up your site you can:

- Use a responsive theme.
- Check your speed with Google's checker.
- Use a caching plugin to serve content quicker.
- Use Mobile Marketing Campaigns

To win more conversions from mobile users, it's essential for your marketing strategy to include campaigns that target them specifically.

Use an Upsell!

Upselling is a proven tactic for increasing eCommerce revenue. You can encourage people to buy a more expensive version of a product they're already interested in:

- On the product page
- During checkout
- After checkout

You can also upsell to your current customers. It's way easier to sell to existing customers than new ones. Plus, targeted recommendations bring in about 30% of eCommerce revenue. And there's a rise in customer lifetime value. That means over time, you earn more.

To use upselling effectively:

- Make sure you show why the upsell is valuable.
- Get the pricing right – Kissmetrics recommends 60% cheaper than what's in the cart.
- Use social proof to make it more appealing.
- other ways to upsell include:
- Display your upsell on the cart page or high converting pages with page-level targeting.
- Use Smart Tags to personalize offers based on what's in the cart.
- Use A/B testing to see which offer works best.

Keep It Simple

One of the top rules you should keep in mind during the eCommerce design process is “KISS”—keep it simple, silly!

When it comes to designing an eCommerce website, simple is always better. The more elements you have on the page (Colors! Banner Ads! ALL THE POP-UPS!), the more it takes away from the entire point of the website—closing a sale.

You don't need a ton of bells and whistles on your eCommerce website—all they do is act as distractions. Keep your design clear, clean, and simple—and keep the focus on the sale.

Make branding a priority.

When it comes to shopping online, people want to buy from established brands—not faceless eCommerce sites that look like a front for trying to steal your credit card information.

If you want to build the trust you need to drive serious sales with your eCommerce business, you need to put some serious thought into your branding. Your branding is like the DNA of your eCommerce business; it's who you are as a company, what you're about, and how you're different from your competitors—and it plays a huge part in building a connection with your audience and driving sales.

If you want to get the most from your eCommerce design, take the time to define your brand—and then infuse that branding into your design. If you're not sure who you are as a brand, that's ok! You're just going to want to do a little business soul-searching before you get designing. Ask yourself questions like:

- If my brand was a person, who would it be?
- If I had to describe my brand in three words, what would they be
- What makes my brand different from other eCommerce shops out there?
- What do we do better than anyone else on the market?

Once you know who you are, you can work it into the branding of your eCommerce site. And that branding? It'll help build trust with your audience—and drive serious sales in the process.

Use Social Proof

Another way to build that oh-so-important trust? Social proof.

When you're designing your eCommerce site, look for ways to show your potential customers the positive feedback you've gotten from your existing customers. Add a ratings section where people can rate your products (and then get as many 5-star reviews as you can). Add a testimonials section where you feature customer photos with a quote or two about what a great experience they had working with you. Ask customers to review your products—and what they like about them—and then add them to your blog.

The more your website visitors see that other people have had a positive experience shopping on your site (whether that's through reviews or testimonials) the more trustworthy you'll appear—and the more your conversions will go up as a result.

Check your website analytics setup.

We often come across websites that aren't set up correctly. Are the goals defined? Is organic traffic getting credit for leads and sales? Google Tag Manager lets you understand how often your organic traffic led to PDF downloads or how many times organic search visitors followed website links to email addresses like info@ and sales@.

Page titles are an obvious area to look at for optimization. Website pages can rank well with different approaches to the page title (e.g., dashes, vertical pipes, or no separators):

- Drip – Coffee Makers – Coffee & Espresso – The Home Depot
- Coffee Makers | Drip | The Home Depot
- Buy Coffee Makers at The Home Depot

The key is to tweak titles over time based on ranking data, keyword relevance, and search volume – and then test the variations. Only testing will reveal which works best. Some marketers prefer to avoid anything that breaks up keyword phrases. That's unfortunate because they might miss out on better rankings from different scenarios. For the coffee maker example, a team could try these combinations:

- Coffee Makers (week one)
- Buy Coffee Makers (week two)
- Buy Coffee Makers at The Home Depot (week three)
- Coffee Makers at The Home Depot (week four)
- Drip Coffee Makers at The Home Depot (week five)

Focus on page load speed!

We believe page load speed is a nominal ranking factor (many enterprise websites rank well even if they don't appear as quickly as they should). But it's a technical (and experience) issue you should address. Use a tool like GTmetrix or Google's PageSpeed Insights to get a sense of your speed.

Favor clean, short URLs.

URLs likely still make a slight difference with search engine rankings. That's why you should keep them short. Ensure that the few words you use have the most weight. Don't dilute a page URL by loading it with 12 words from your headline. Searchers are more likely to click on short URLs on the results pages.

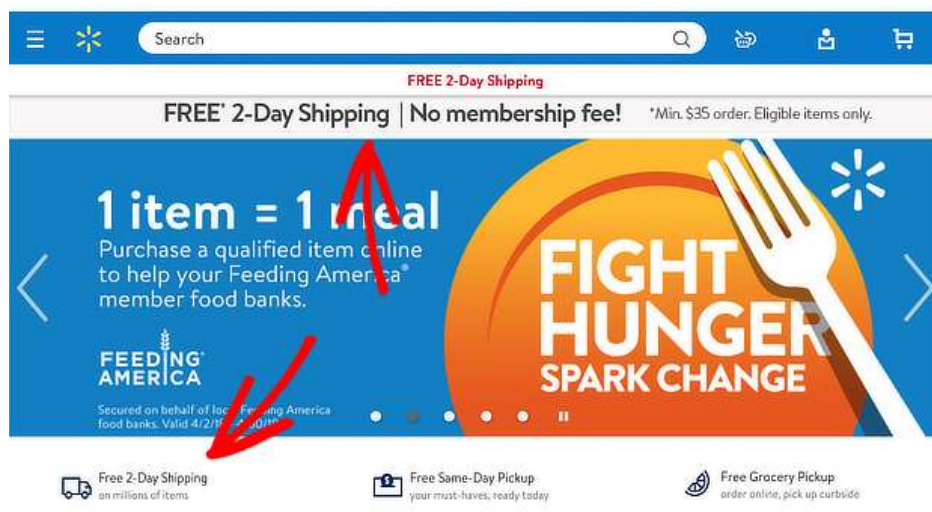

Let Customers Write Products Reviews

Product reviews have a major influence on buyer behavior. Be sure to spotlight any positive reviews you receive to help give potential buyers the confirmation they need to purchase your products!

Reveal "Free Shipping" (or Shipping Fee) on the Product Pages

High shipping charges are a leading cause of cart abandonment, and no shipping charges is what beautiful shopping dreams are made of. eCommerce businesses that offer free shipping have multiple advantages over those who don't. Read how adding free shipping increased AOV by 7.32% for NuFace.

But we all have our financial constraints. If you charge for shipping, mention that cost upfront. Ozscopes goes a step ahead and provides a shipping calculator on their product page:

A Comscore study revealed that 47% of customers would abandon their carts if they were charged for shipping during the checkout. So, make sure your customers aren't faced with any unpleasant surprises as a part of the checkout process.

Build an Email List

One of the best ways to build a relationship with your customers is through email marketing. Email marketing is proven to have great ROI, which means more sales for you.

Here are some ways to use email marketing effectively to promote your online store.

Nail the Subject Line

The first thing email recipients see is the email subject line and the preview text. If they like them, they'll be motivated to open your emails. That's why it pays to optimize them both.

Start by creating an enticing email subject line that tells recipients what your email is about. Follow that up by teasing the contents in the preview text. That can help convince recipients to open your email.

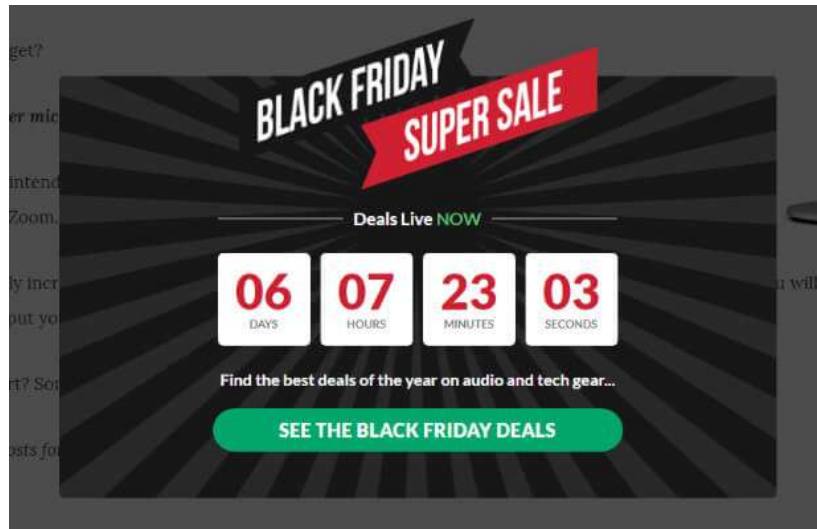

Personalize Your Emails

Everyone knows that personalization makes people more engaged with your emails and your marketing.

But it's not just about using email recipients' first name. Make recipients happy by tailoring emails to:

- Their gender (like showing male clothing to male recipients)
- The emails they've engaged with before (if they've clicked a link in a previous email, your next one can showcase a related item)
- What they've bought on your site (highlighting complementary products)

Here are some more examples of eCommerce personalization. PodcastInsights grew subscribers by 1099% with onsite retargeting.

Go Seasonal

The holidays are an important time for eCommerce retailers. They're responsible for 20% of annual sales. That's why it makes sense to use major holidays and other special occasions to give your emails some extra interest.

The period between October and January includes a lot of holidays, but it isn't the only time of year you can do holiday sales. You can also brand emails for observances like:

- Valentine's Day
- Memorial Day
- Back to school
- The first day of fall
- The winter solstice

Here are some more tips on holiday email marketing.

Use Transactional Emails

If you're not marketing to customers via transactional emails, you're missing an opportunity. Most people open order confirmation and shipping emails, so use that space to:

- Brand the emails for a seamless customer experience.
- Recommend related products.
- Make a discount offer recipients won't want to refuse.

Automate Your Email Marketing

Using automation in email marketing is a proven way to drive more sales and get more repeat customers without having to spend a lot of money on paid promotions.

Beyond abandonment, you can try other email automation sequences. For example, you can create a popup to offer abandoning visitors a coupon, freebie, or another lead magnet. Then you can send a series of emails to let them get to know you and build trust.

Welcome Non-Buyers

Welcome emails are also important, as they get four times as many opens as regular emails.

A good welcome email series for non-buyers could include:

- An introduction, along with delivering the incentive you offered for signing up.
- More detail about your brand, with an invitation to ask questions.
- Showing off some of your bestsellers and related customer reviews
- Sharing a piece of great content that subtly educates buyers about your products and services.
- Social proof

Reward Your VIPs

Most of your sales will come from a small percentage of customers who buy repeatedly. So, it's worth nurturing these customers a little. You can easily identify and segment these customers in your email marketing software, then send a series of emails that show you recognize their loyalty to your brand.

In other words, let them know they're important to you by offering a free gift or coupon that's exclusive to them.

Win Back Disengaged Customers

At the other end of the scale, don't ignore the customers who seem to be ignoring you. Instead, make an effort to win them back with a re-engagement campaign. To do this, you can send a series of emails including:

- Noting that they've been quiet and asking why.
- Highlighting anything that's new since last they visited your store.
- A coupon or offer that makes them want to come back.
- Offering the chance to unsubscribe if they're really not interested – this helps keep your email list clean.

Troubleshoot Common Errors

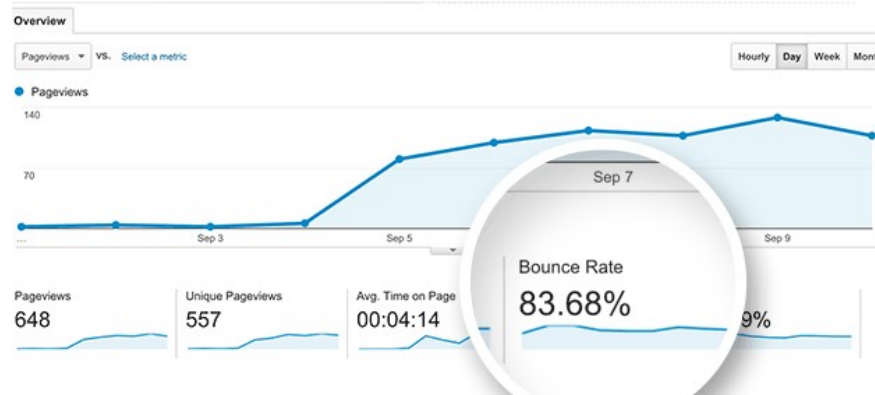

Before we go, let's look at a few common errors that affect the user experience on eCommerce websites, and how they can reduce conversions.

People Are Bouncing

Your bounce rate is the percentage of visitors who leave your site after visiting just one page. Getting visitors to stick around longer will help you increase sales.

A high bounce rate could be due to site speed, usability errors, or just a lack of engaging content.

You can find your bounce rate easily in your Google Analytics dashboard.

Bounce rate is the percentage of users who land on your website and decide to leave without going to a second page.

A higher bounce rate indicates that you were not able to convince the user to stay and act on your call-to-action (i.e., buy your product).

A visitor can bounce from your site by clicking on a link to a different website, clicking the back button to leave your website, closing the open window/tab, typing a new URL, or due to a session time out (caused by web hosting errors).

Now you're probably thinking that's just normal user behavior, right? Well yes, it is, but there is such a thing as a good bounce rate vs bad bounce rate.

Let's take a look at average bounce rate by industry benchmarks and determine what's a good bounce rate.

Average Bounce Rate by Industry + What's a Good Bounce Rate?

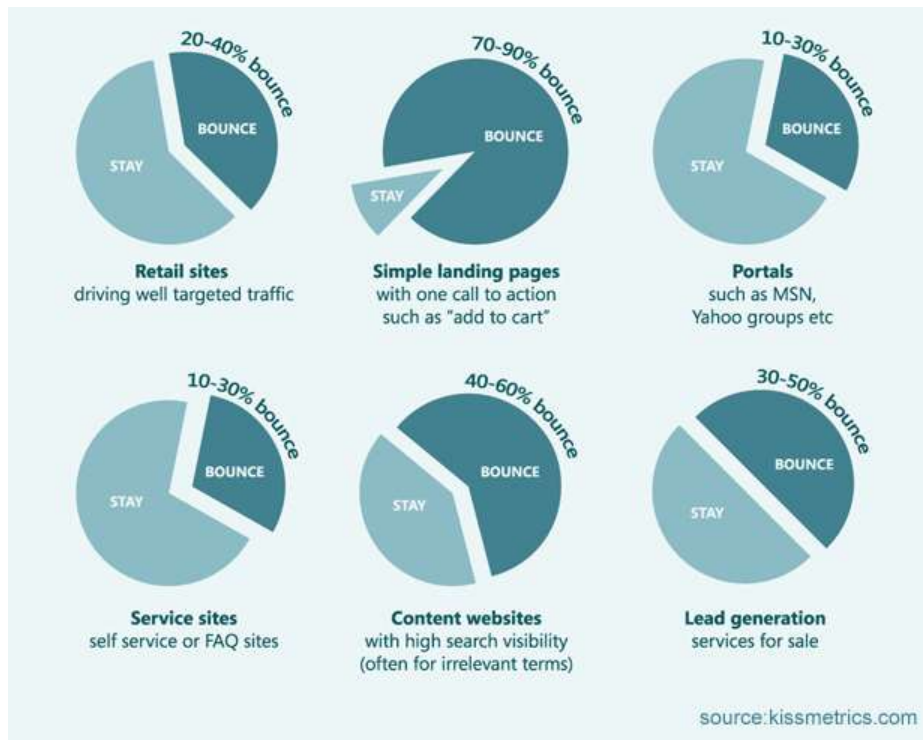

You may be wondering what is a good bounce rate? Well, the general rule of thumb is that:

- 80%+ is very bad.
- 70 – 80% is poor.
- 50 – 70% is average.
- 30 – 50% is excellent.

20% or below is likely a tracking error (due to duplicate analytics code, incorrect implementation of events tracking, third-party addons such as live chat plugins).

While the above metrics are good to start, bounce rate varies across industries and the type of content you have.
